Supply chain management involves flows of goods, information, documents and funds. For cross-border trading activities, customs implications are critical. Not only China, but the taxation of the importing countries should also be considered. Proper planning is of great importance to the companies. Up to date, China has set up a number of bonded logistics areas which have special policies to encourage logistics, warehousing and trading. This seminar is going to examine how to build up an effective supply chain from operation process, tax and customs perspectives.

Topics to be covered in the seminar include:

1. Why supply chain management correlates to customs?
2. What are the benefits of synchronising supply chain management with customs solutions?
3. How is China Customs regime affecting the supply chain management of companies?
4. Case study: supply chain models for different types of business
Speakers will use cases to illustrate the concepts and explain the implications.

Speakers:

Miss Bolivia Cheung, Partner, KPMG China

Bolivia advises multinational clients on taxation, customs duty and business regulations in respect of the structure of investment, supply chain management and assists clients in developing business activities in China.

Mr Melsson Yang, Manager, Trade & Customs, KPMG China

Melsson has worked in China Customs before. His working experience as the Regional Customs & Brokerage Manager in one of the leading logistics companies gave him an opportunity to examine various supply chain solutions in practice. Melsson has been advising multinational companies in customs and supply chain management projects, customs health check review, and negotiation with Customs in audit, processing trade, tariff classification and valuation cases.

Language: Cantonese and Putonghua
